Emergency Shelter of the Fox Valley Hires New Executive Director

The Emergency Shelter of the Fox Valley (ESFV) announces the hiring of a new Executive Director, Jerome Martin.

“We are thrilled to have Jerome join the ESFV as our new Executive Director on January 30th. He has a deep passion for the Fox Cities and the people who live here. We know he will be a great leader for our organization and help the ESFV live out its mission,” says John Russo, ESFV Board Chair.

As Executive Director, Martin will be responsible for providing the overall direction and leadership of the ESFV. While organizing and providing the management of the agency’s resources, both human and financial, he will ensure the provision of quality services for homeless individuals and those at risk of homelessness are met.

Jerome comes to the ESFV with a background that is rich in strategic leadership, community outreach, building relationships, problem solving and collaborations. Jerome has lived in the Fox Cities for many years and has served in law enforcement for 26 years, 18 of which were with the Grand Chute Police Department. Most recently he has served in the capacity of the Technical Operations Division Commander for the department.

“For the past 30 years the ESFV has been an important part of the Fox Cities Community in serving homeless men, women and children. We look forward to an exciting future under the leadership of Jerome,” said Russo.

The mission of the Emergency Shelter of the Fox Valley, Inc., is to provide temporary shelter to homeless individuals and families in a safe environment, while providing guidance to those both homeless and at-risk that promotes independence.
